

Technology of the Arts

Research Like TED

How would YOU like to present in a TEDx talk?

Many of us have watched a TED talk or two and I'm sure many of you have done the "I'll just watch one more" for a few hours as well.

Now, imagine while scouring the internet you saw YOUR TEDx talk.

SUNY Potsdam is planning our very own TEDx talk in Fall 2018 and you could present!

To help you understand the art of presenting your research effectively we will be holding a...

Cross-Disciplinary Workshop Day on April 14

We will focus on technology and the arts, and the day will help you craft your academic, practice-led, or artistic research – right to the level where you could apply with it for TEDxSUNYPotsdam.

The day will consist of stimulating presentations that explore the boundaries between technology and the arts, from faculty across SUNY Potsdam; plus workshops that address questions around best-practice in research, and networking opportunities.

Whether yours is desktop-based, inspired by or supporting the creative industries, whether it is a choreography, a composition, or takes the shape of a creative performance – we want you!

If you are interested, please email cimbe@potsdam.edu

This event is brought to you by a cooperation of the Crane Institute for Music Business and Entrepreneurship, and the Arts Management Program, the Department of Theatre and Dance, and SUNY Potsdam.
